New York, Dec. 4.—Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States, sailed today for Europe to participate in one of the five representatives of the United States to the peace conference to be held in France. The transport George Washington got underway at 10:15 a. m.

For the first time in the nation's history a president stepped on board a steamship today. The George Washington, which today was the transport for the president, was escorted by a fleet of dreadnaughts and a squadron of aeroplanes. The president's departure was a momentous event, and the nation watched with interest the departure of the president and his party.

A picturesque military reception was accorded the president, Mrs. Wilson, Secretary of War Baker, Secretary of the Navy, and other officials. The president's departure was a momentous event, and the nation watched with interest the departure of the president and his party.

Accompanied by General McManus and his staff, the presidential party passed through the city and boarded the transport. The president's departure was a momentous event, and the nation watched with interest the departure of the president and his party.

SENATE WILL TAKE ACTION ON CUMMINS RESOLUTION DEC. 5

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Dec. 4.—Action on the resolution of Senator Cummins, of Iowa, Republican, opposing a senate committee to be sent to Paris for the peace conference, was postponed till tomorrow by the senate of foreign relations committee, after an all-day session to discuss the resolution and hear Senator Cummins in its behalf.

When the meeting was over administration leaders said privately the resolution would not be approved. Most of the Democrat leaders of the committee are said to have opposed it while the Republicans were divided on the subject.

For nearly two hours behind closed doors, the committee argued the questions involved. Senator Cummins is understood to have emphasized that he did not propose that the committee should interfere with or embarrass the functions of the president and the American peace delegation; that its information only would be to obtain information from the committee.

There was little disposition, committee members declared, in today's meeting to criticize the president for not giving the senate representation on the peace delegation.

Across the waters of the Hudson, just as the George Washington was passing the New York harbor, a fleet of more than two hundred American soldiers returning to American shores on the British transport Lapland, from crowded decks, waved their hands and cheered.

On the train trip from Washington, extraordinary precautions were taken by the secret service. Captain John Henry and his entire Washington staff accompanied the president. Meanwhile two hundred secret service experts had thoroughly examined the George Washington and its crew.

The president's party included two other members of the American delegation, Secretary of State Robert Lansing, and Henry White, former ambassador to France.

Expect Rough Weather. The president's departure was a momentous event, and the nation watched with interest the departure of the president and his party.

LONDON PAPERS PAY TRIBUTE TO PRESIDENT WILSON

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

LONDON, London, Dec. 4.—President Wilson's address to the American Congress was extensively commented upon by this morning's newspapers.

The Morning Post, while paying tribute to the warmest terms to the president and to American co-operation in the war, insists upon the importance of the exact relation of the 14 points to the peace settlement being understood.

The Daily News asks anxiously for evidence of the acceptance of the spirit of the 14 points.

SENATOR KELLOGG IN STRONG APPEAL FOR LEAGUE OF NATIONS

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Dec. 4.—"Creation of a league of nations to maintain peace—not a super-government to dominate and interfere with national internal affairs, but a world tribunal for arbitration of international disputes with enlightened public opinion, a large factor in forcing its decrees—was advocated by Senator Kellogg of Minnesota, republican, in an address today in the Senate.

"I believe the time has come," he said, "to try to establish a league to prevent war and to enforce peace."

Regarding President Wilson's action on peace questions, Senator Kellogg said:

"I deplore what seems to be the disposition of the president not to take the American people into his confidence."

The president should not, on behalf of the American people, make radical proposals until he is sure that they are endorsed by the people.

During the debate, Senator Borah of Idaho, republican, introduced a resolution providing for possession of the peace terms as soon as agreed upon and for open discussion during consideration of the treaty in the senate.

NEXT YEAR.

We know what this past year has brought, but how about next year? The year is practically at an end. The formalities of signing the actual peace terms are at hand, the men who are to decide the fate of the world for a century to come are assembling, but what of next year?

This year's work has been accomplished under difficulties. Our farms have been forced to produce food for the army only at home, but for the men called into federal service and for the starving nations across the water. We must continue to feed these people until they can rehabilitate their country, war-torn and demoralized. This means that next year's problem is cut out for us and we must face it with the same attitude we faced this year.

It means that this Rock county farmers must again plan to produce the maximum amount of foodstuffs, both in grains and cattle and swine, and that our city garden plots must be continued as in the past two years, perhaps even more intensively than ever.

True, the world has released millions of bushels of wheat of Australia and Argentina and Russia, but still this country must do its share for at least another twelve months.

This means redoubled activity on the part of our food conservation boards and while the restrictions on sugar and coal and other commodities are essential to human comfort, have been eased, we must not abuse the privileges accorded us and fully realize that over there in Europe are thousands upon thousands of women and children, young men and old, who are actually suffering for food to sustain life.

In the line of nations to receive aid those who have suffered the ravages of the invaders should receive first attention and then should come the Central Powers that caused all this disturbance and suffering, wanton murders, rape and violations of all the rights of man in civilized days. Germany pays for food and makes the dire threat of revolution if not given an abundance. It should call on deaf ears. Lloyd George says Germany must pay to the utmost, and the world stands behind him.

Even though Germany did start this war, violate all treaties and throw the civilized world into a state of terror, the mere call for aid from these ruthless people should not be answered. Our starving boys that come from their prison camps, our dead that raise their mute prayers, our wounded, all demand consideration and we must not forget them.

Meanwhile our work here at home is cut out for us and we must prepare for another strenuous year of production. True, with the returning soldiers it will not be so much a question of labor, but still there must be no let-up permitted and the American people are not the ones to allow it when they step to realize what it means to the world at large.

THE WAGE QUESTION.

One of the most perplexing of our after the war problems, is the matter of wages. A great many workers have had no advance comparable with that of the cost of living. Retail merchants have not usually secured any larger income. Teachers, clergymen, and many other classes of people have to get along on about the same pay they always had, while the cost of living has advanced from a third to a half.

The majority of people have had advances in wages or other increase of income, but as prices have gone up about the same amount, it is doubtful if they are better off. The result is to check production in many directions. Building and repairing of houses for instance has largely stopped on account of the cost of labor. Repairs are postponed until the last possible moment.

The producers of manufactured articles and food products have not suffered by the advance in wages. They add the higher cost of labor to the price of their product and get the same old profit. As it is impossible to adjust these matters evenly some people are better off and some are worse off, and the distribution of wage advances has been very unfair and uneven.

Where strikes are threatened, employer and employee must be willing to submit their case to disinterested arbitration. Public sentiment will not tolerate violent action.

People must be willing to leave their problems to fair arbitration of disinterested parties. Producers must not expect profits that will quickly amass wealth. Workers must remember that prices must be such that goods can be sold without checking consumption.

If wages in any industry reach so high a point that the people have to cut down on their use of the product, the inevitable result will be to throw people out of work. We must all be reasonable, and try to see things from the point of view of other interests than our own.

SPAIN'S PRESENTMENT.

Madrid, Dec. 3.—The Spanish ministry resigned today. —News Item.

The above dispatch tells a story all its own of the dilemma that Spain now finds itself in. Throughout the entire war Spain has been in the neutral class, but strongly pro-German. The propaganda that has been spread throughout the realm by clever agents of the Kaiser did its work, and as a result the majority of the people were not prepared for the sudden collapse of the German empire and they are left stranded.

King Alfonso probably knows enough of the situation to have wielded his influence in favor of the allies, but among the masses the pro-German doctrine found favor, for it was also anti-American, and lashed by the statesmen who evidently had felt the influence of the gentle method of German persuasion, they believed all that was told to them.

Now Spain finds itself in a peculiar situation and promptly, with true Latin spirit, the cabinet resigns in toto, to leave the situation up to the King. Really no one feels sorry, but it must be uncomfortable for Alfonso.

And the question arises whether it will pay the French best to rebuild their cities, or leave them as they are and charge the Americans to finance and apiece to look at the work of the Huns.

If the Germans want to get food faster, they might raise from the bottom of the ocean some of the ships they sunk which would facilitate grain movement.

The same people that used to penetrate those wildernesses about prunes on the boarding house table, are now kicking because the land-lady won't give them any.

It is agreed by all our profound thinkers, that prices can't come down because inflation costs so much, and labor can't come down because prices are so high.

The farmers that are getting together to increase the price of milk, include some who have always vehemently denounced the trusts.

A reader asks us how the congressmen spend their vacation? Well, a considerable number of them have been exceedingly busy explaining why they were defeated.

Ambitious politicians are now feeling they made a mistake not to join the army when the war looked pretty near over.

It will not be necessary to go to France to secure souvenirs of the war, as our tax bills will supply that need for some time to come.

Our tourists will be disappointed if all those ruined French cities are rebuilt before they get over to look at them.

There isn't much danger of Bolshevism starting in a town having an adequate number of barbers.

There is a movement on foot to give school teachers as much pay as day laborers.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY K. MULLIGAN

A MULLIGAN BY ANY OTHER NAME.

Mulligan is a good old Irish name, although one might be inclined to doubt it, glancing through the stack of mail from overseas addressed to William J. Mulligan, chairman of the Columbus Columbus Club, New York.

A missive from a French polly, who has tasted his first free K. of C. batch of snuffs and cigars, has thanks and an invitation for more, has "Mulligan" (acute accent over the e) a hardy British Tommy speaks the surname of "innocent" Irish kings, "Mulligan"; a Sikh, who has eaten a bar of K. C. chocolate and yearned for more, addressed the K. of C. chairman as "the sahib Mulligan"; a member of the Polish legion writes the name that for a thousand years has braved the battle and the breeze, Mulligan; and one of our own salient colored boys, back from an excursion in No Man's Land, states that one hand is missing, but that he is alternately smoking a K. of C. cigar and writing his letter with the other hand, hailing from Missouri, he spells the chairman's name Mulligan.

And a Czech-Slovak warrior spells the name Muzilgan, but William J. Mulligan has this consolation—a chairman called by any other name is just as efficient.

He fought, did the fun, for his place in the sun, but he couldn't maintain his place in the rain. —Ted Robinson.

After reading the following letter from Syracuse, N. Y., few will be able to doubt the efficiency of women in trades:

A storekeeper engaged a woman to take an inventory of his stock. He mentioned that everything was to be counted and the articles listed. He went home and had the "fun" and several days afterward he returned to the store, but couldn't find Mollie, the young lady he had left in charge. He started down cellar and there, in a far corner were piled his sacks of raw peanuts with Mollie starting on the third sack.

"I found 15,472 peanuts in the first sack," she said.

We have been completely perplexed trying to decide whether this headline found in a western paper is a knock or a boast: "Soldier's Romance Ends With Wedding."

Another article the world will refuse to accept is the Gott that was "made in Germany."

Society item in an Atchison paper: "Mrs. E. F. Feltus was called back from St. Joe by the death of her pet goldfish, Oscar. Our condolences, indeed."

Montenegro's King Not Worried Over Reported Ousting

(By Associated Press.)

Paris, Dec. 4.—My disposition was but a stray case to see which way the wind blows," said King Nicholas of Montenegro to a Matin representative yesterday. "If a meeting was held at Podgoritz, where the Montenegrin national assembly is reported to have met, I have not the slightest news of it. A meeting such as that one could have been held only under the shadow of Bayonets. A legal plebiscite is not carried out by armed force. That is why I consider what has passed down there as being without importance."

London Newspaper Denies That Time Limit Has Been Set

(By Associated Press.)

London, Dec. 4.—The Express claims to be able to deny the report from Berlin yesterday that a new ultimatum had been sent to the German government because all of the locomotives to be handed over under the terms of the armistice cannot be delivered at once.

The newspaper says that it is true that Germany is not keeping up to stipulated schedule and that Marshal Foch has given warning that Germany will be responsible for further delays, but he has fixed a time limit for the carrying out of the clause relative to railroad equipment.

We have complied with the Government's request to be satisfied with a reasonable profit and to keep the quality up to standard.

Claims That He Threw Trotsky Out When He Wanted Money

Washington, Dec. 4.—Testifying at the senate judiciary committee's investigation of brewery and German propaganda, Louis N. Hammerling, president of the American Association of foreign language newspapers, declared today that two years ago he had been held captive by the Russian Bolshevik minister, out of his office after the latter had threatened his life unless he received a sum of money.

Reference to the Bolshevik leader was made while Hammerling was vigorously denying charges that he had taken any part in German propaganda work.

"Trotsky came into my office often," the witness said, "and insisted on seeing me. He would see no other person in the office and he always wanted me to give him money. I finally took him by the neck and threw him out, and in doing so I cut my hand on his rubber collar."

Municipal Ownership. Milwaukee.—Ownership by the municipality of tracts of land upon which co-partnerships and tenant societies may build homes for leasing and possible final conveyance to the citizens occupying them is proposed in a comprehensive report adopted by the city housing commission, meeting in Mayor Hoan's office.

The report, which is made to the mayor, proposes that initial legislation be asked of the Wisconsin legislature the coming winter to carry out the ideas proposed in the report. The proposals include besides municipal ownership of land and enabling acts for the organization of co-operative societies a request that the planning commission be given power to carry out the ideas of the report and to supervise the laying out, construction and building of the homes with a view to sanitary conditions and with park, playground and other adjuncts to healthful and proper living conditions. Suggestion is also made in the report that the best possible facilities for transportation to all parts of the city be provided so that all homes in the outskirts shall be quick of access.

Municipal Judge Dead. SHEBOYGAN.—John M. Giblin, who died last week, had a keen insight into human nature which he demonstrated as municipal judge, 1903 to 1915. In handling juvenile cases he was particularly delicate to appear before him at the end of their probation. If a child's school report card gave evidence of good work the judge gave him five cents. Some weeks it would cost him 35 or 40 cents, but the method was effective. He was active in establishing the first workhouse in Sheboygan county in 1896. John Schmitt, 48, New York, was sentenced in Judge Giblin to fifteen days for larceny, Dec. 23, 1907, and put in five days on the stone pile, the first institution of its kind, so far as is known, in Wisconsin. Three years ago the stone pile was moved from the jail to the workhouse at the Taylor farm, where it is used summer and winter. The stone was brought from the fields by farmers. The crushed stone is sold to the city. Judge Giblin traveled extensively as an auctioneer in his younger days. Thirty years ago he invented a fire extinguisher for which he refused

The Daily Novelette

A VANDAL.

A slouching, sinking creature touched and slunk up Chalkin Street early after dawn. "Can it be that one so evil looking as to any good at this hour of the morning?" His brow is an inch and a quarter in height and slants toward the south, where he faces the north, at an angle of 45 degrees. His eyes are small and cunning, especially the left one. His ears stand out straight from his high cheekbones, and his nose is short and broken.

Surely the fellow is a vandal. He slouches, sinking, slinking, slinking, he approaches milk bottles, resting on front steps. "Good will in the nursery!" He snatches one! He snatches two! He snatches a dozen! But we need not say that a being with an unsavory map must surely be a vandal? And a vandal he is. But say! Are appearances for the twentieth time deceiving?

They are. Our hero is A. Vandal, owner for the Swansong Milkery, and for every empty bottle he removes he hands a substitute a full one! Slowly, please, professor.

LOCAL SOLDIERS WILL BE GIVEN RECEPTION

LARGE RECEPTION AND HOME-COMING PLANNED FOR RETURNING HEROES. COMMITTEE APPOINTED.

FAVOR LIBERTY HOME

Liberty Building Discussed at Meeting Held at Chamber of Commerce Office Last Evening.

Janesville heroes returning home from the army will be given a reception which will be the largest that has ever been held in this section of the state.

At a meeting last evening at the Chamber of Commerce office attended by J. P. Cullen, J. E. Green, A. E. Matheson, Edward Buss, M. E. Richardson and Robert Whipple, a committee of sixty representing every organization in the city was selected to have charge of the reception.

Owing to the fact that no plans for demobilization have been made as yet, it is not known whether the boys will return in groups or in small numbers.

If they come in large numbers, a reception will be given each contingent, but if they arrive in Janesville a few at a time, no reception will be given until all of them are home.

No definite plans for a reception of any kind have been made but the committee which is composed of over sixty persons will undoubtedly hold a meeting in the near future.

A memorial for the boys was also discussed at the meeting and all those present asserted themselves in favor of a Liberty building which could be used as a community building.

Those present at the meeting last night endorsed the plan for the building. Those present at the meeting last night endorsed the plan for the building of a Liberty building.

Janesville boys who went forth to fight are not to be forgotten and it is certain that they will be given the biggest reception ever held in this city when they return home.

Believes in Future.

KENOSHA—C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motor company, who recently resigned as production and engineering chief in the government aircraft division says: "I am a firm believer in the future of the business industries of this country. I believe that while the readjustments to normal conditions will take time it is none the less certain. The recent limited production of passenger cars and trucks for the public, leaves a big demand ready for the manufacturers who are equipped to take advantage of this situation. I believe the country is going to see great prosperity in the next three or four years and am sure that the motor car business will profit to its full share in this general prosperity."

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION
Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative. No gripping is the "keynote" of these little, sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action. If you have a "dark brown mouth"—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime. Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

(Miss Reilly will answer in this column all questions on etiquette)

If a lady offers her hand to a gentleman, he should not grasp it too cordially, as it takes but a slight pressure to be painful when rings are on. Florence: Too bad your friend was so sensitive. He will undoubtedly call you up or see you soon when you can have an understanding. At the present time, there does not seem to be anything to do.

Inquisitive: The letters "S. A. G." placed in the lower left hand corner of an envelope are new to me and I am sorry I cannot tell you what they mean. Why not ask your friend?

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a very striking blonde of nineteen—about my friends tell me so. I am really in love with a boy who is a senior. We are not engaged, although we have a mutual understanding. He is a handsome and very clever young man who draws a good salary. I am sure that he will be a success. I am not for three other girls who are trying to win him away from me.

One night two of these girls met after he had taken me to a large club, but don't know how to arrange it. I know some of the girls in the club. Shall I write and ask them to meet together, or go and see one of them in person? CLUB MEMBER.

Since you know one of the girls, talk to her about it and let her persuade the girls to the club. Doubtless if meetings can be arranged.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am thirty years old and am engaged to a soldier who is now in France. I have been writing to him twice a week ever since he has been away, but he only writes once a week or once in ten days. Do you think I write too often? I have no engagement ring.

BROWN EYES.
If I were you I would not write more than once a week since he does not write to me. I would like to see him more often than to get so many letters that they mean little to him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) We are three girls 16, 17 and 21 years old. Would it be proper to go to camp to visit soldier friends without an older person along? We will return the same day we go.

BLUE EYES.
(2) May the 10-year-old girl receive letters from soldier friends? (3) Is it proper to wear silk stockings in winter? (4) You should not go unless an older person chaperons you. (5) It is all right for her to receive letters if the soldier is willing to permit sentimental letters. (6) Yes, thin stockings are worn in winter.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: How can we become acquainted with some nice young men who will take us to entertainments while our friends are in the army?

RUTH AND MABEL.
There are not many young men in the city these days. You attend church or school, you should be able to meet a few there.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a boy and a member of a club called "The Blue Y." There are a dozen or so members in the club. I want these two girls to come together and make one club.

YVONNE.
You have no claim on the boy. You were not justified in following him. If you want to keep him you must not show your jealousy and suspicion. As soon as he thinks you want to be exclusive, he will give you up for some girl who is more indifferent.

the home of the poor in cold weather. The machine positively sickening, and the warmth of the sleeping room particularly makes that of your mollycoddle steam-heated apartment seem almost cheerful.

Lack of cleanliness may be suggested as an explanation of the prevalence of disease among the poor. In the case of typhoid fever and the other intestinal infections (in which the play of such a prominent role) filthiness is undoubtedly an important factor. A household or other place that harbors flies at any time of the year is certainly a filthy place, and the intestinal diseases are filth diseases. If that title can be applied to any type of disease.

Crowding to confined living quarters, necessitating prolonged intimate contact between the various occupants at all times, is the real cause of the undue frequency of sickness among the poor. And no one in power, no one with any influence, raises a finger against the entrenched landlords who gleefully and insolently gather the profits from all this.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
The Prize Winning Letter
Here is the most businesslike letter we have ever received, and with a fitting reply. The addition of the suffix to the salutation, it would be a perfectly courteous letter as well.

Art, who enclosed properly addressed envelope with the letter, and the name of his city and state written out plainly, received a particularly prompt reply. Call again, Mr. Art.

Sweating Feet
Some time ago I noticed a remedy for sweating feet in your column, but I failed to make note of it. Would you mind mentioning it again? I would like to use it. I have cold water only, never hot water, and bathe as rarely as possible. Smear them with Vaseline ointment. Powder inside the stockings and inside the shoes freely with powdered alum.

Please tell me whether there is anything harmful in this lotion used on my complexion: 1/2 ounce flake white, 2 ounces bay rum, 2 ounces rose water, 1 ounce glycerine. I am using it in an old family doctor book and it was guaranteed perfectly harmless. (Mrs. O'Brien, a nurse, writes: "I am a nurse, and I suspect, was more competent in compiling ailments than in advising remedies. I have seen many cases of carbuncles, and numerous cases of serious lead poisoning have been reported in women who used it as a cosmetic.")

Bake for 45 minutes, serve with ring of fried apples made by cutting apples crosswise and frying in a little fat. The tenderloin is excellent when taken out of gravy and sliced cold.

Jellied Beef—Cook two or one-half pounds of beef in nearly enough water to cover for two or three hours. Any desired spices or seasoning should be added to the water in which the meat is cooked. A stalk of celery, a slice or two of onion and a few peppercorns should always be used. When meat is very tender, remove from liquid and chop with salt, pepper and a little vinegar. Cool slightly, add to the meat; mix well, and pour into two loaf bread pans. Wet in cold water and press in chili and salad.

Braised Round of Beef—Purchase four or six pounds of under-round of beef. Rub it with ground allspice, dust it with pepper and salt. Into shape. Slice an onion, one carrot, chop a cupful of celery tops. Put them with a quart of hot water into the roaster; put the meat on top; cover, and bake two hours. Dust the meat with salt and bake another hour. Serve with a brown sauce made from water in the pan.

Casserole of Rice, Hashed Meat and Tomatoes—Use one cup of rice, which has been cooked, leftover meat, one cup, when hashed. Turn one-half can tomatoes on this. Add seasoning, using onions and cheese if preferred, and bake.

Woman's Faith Helps Husband
"I owe my good health to my wife who had faith in a newspaper ad she saw of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I was down so badly with stomach and liver trouble after 15 years of suffering and trying every known remedy that I had no faith in anything. This medicine has certainly been a God-send to me." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the terminal cancer from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. HOW TO REACH THE HEART

How much shorter and easier is the road to a person's sympathies if the suffering for which you ask compassion is allied to something in his own experience!

I had that brought home to me the other day by an appeal in behalf of the Syrians and Armenians. In the pamphlet were the usual terrible tales of starvation and homelessness. Of course I was horrified by these, but only impersonally because I never had had any experience with starvation or homelessness.

She could not do a thing to help him. And then I came to a paragraph which told how a social worker went into a home and found a young man stricken with typhus lying on some rags in a corner of the room. Besides him sat his mother, weeping because she had neither food nor medicine to give him.

When I read that sentence, the portals of my heart swung wide open and let in an ache of compassion that would not be assuaged until I had reached for my check-book (not then, for that matter).

You see, one lay sick in my house recently. I piled him with the dearest medicines, smothered him with care, fed him with the best nourishing foods, and even then ached to do more. And this woman had had to sit by her sick absolutely helpless!

She hoped they weren't young people. Here is another example: We were passing a closed greenhouse whose Xmas," and he picked it up and after that he began to laugh, too, for he's a merry little fellow and a good friend of Billy Bunny's.

My but it's lonely these long winter days," said the little rabbit. "Everybody's sound asleep in his winter home. Only you and I and a few others are about," and the little rabbit sighed, for what he said is true, let me tell you.

For in the good Old Summer time, most everybody's round. The feathered folks are in the trees, the furry on the ground.

And all the sweet and verdant dells are ringing with the flower bells. "Cheer up, little rabbit," said the merry little Meadow Mouse, "spring will soon be here, for the buds are on the trees waiting for Mr. Happy Sun and little Miss South Wind to open them," and after that the little kicked up the snow with his strong legs until a big pile of ice hid Dickey Meadowmouse's hat and knocked it off his head.

"Look out! What are you doing," cried Dickey Meadowmouse. "That's my new hat Mother gave me for my owners having invested most of their money in the venture, were simply put out of business, by last winter, extreme cold. I told my companion this tale and she said, "I hope they weren't young people."

"Why?" I asked. "Oh, it must have been so dreadful when they had such high hopes," she said. "Wouldn't it be still more tragic for older people?" I asked. "I suppose so," she said, "but somehow it doesn't seem that way to me," and the reason is that she and her husband (young people) have just passed through a business crisis in which for a time all their money and hopes hung precariously in the balance.

How A Woman Was Taken Out Of Her Home.
The most striking example I ever knew of the power of just the right appeal was that of a young woman who has been for years such a devoted mother to a brood of three small children that she completely lost touch with the outer world.

Then one day at the beginning of the world war, she read how the Belgian mothers were collecting the empty cans of condensed milk from the barracks ash-piles to scrape out the leanings for their babies. That sentence went straight to her heart, and behold! She who had had no interest beyond her home for years, went out collecting money for Belgian babies.

Of course this concentration of sympathy is in a way, a sort of selfishness. But at any rate it's a very forgivable kind.

AMERICAN MOTHERS!

Our boys "over there" are blessed with good American mothers who keep them supplied with warm, hand-knitted socks—knitting, knitting the livelong day, knitting until this horrible war is ended! The women of America belong to that army of mercy that is backing up our boys at the front to the very end. But those American women who have experienced the backache, the dizzy, "headachy," or dragging-down feelings which accompany the weaknesses and ills of woman-kind—all can find some neighbor, some friend, who has been benefited by that "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce's, which was prescribed by him fifty years ago, and which has done so much for woman-kind, a tonic which contains no alcohol nor narcotic. Faded, jaded, tired, overworked women—weak, nervous, delicate and suffering ones. These are the women who are helped to health and strength by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a legitimate medicine that corrects and cures; a tonic that invigorates and builds up; a nerve that soothes and strengthens. Most druggists sell it in tablets or liquid. Send 10 cents to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package of Tablets.

FIVE FRIDAYS

By FRANK R. ADAMS

"I'm sorry," central answered, "but I can't seem to get them. I've been ringing on that line for the last ten minutes. There's another party trying to get them."

"Another party?" I questioned. "Who?"

"I couldn't say. It isn't any one I know. His voice sounds like he was a tall, thin young man from New York."

"Can't get them," I told the listening group.

"What can we do now? I must go to help mother. I must go. I must go," Lucille began to get hysterical.

"Wait, dear," Vida said, patting her hand. "We can't go because we haven't any boat." Turning to the rest of us, she asked, "Whom could we telephone to and ask to go over there?"

"The sheriff is the right man, I should think," Bopp suggested.

"He'd be plumb tickled, too," added Captain Perkins. "He ain't had a chance to arrest nobody since he's been sworn in."

"That's it, the sheriff," Lucille said feverishly. "Get the sheriff and let me talk to him."

"(We don't want the public to know about this.) I objected.

"What do I care about the public if my mother is in danger?" Lucille very properly demanded.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Summer House Captive. HERE seemed to be nothing else to do, so I asked the telephone operator to see if she could locate the sheriff.

"I guess he's down to the railroad station," central volunteered. "It's most likely that he's most usually goes down there looking for a suspicious character to get off the north bound passenger. I'll ask the agent if he's there."

She did, and he was. After a slight delay I found myself addressing a strange voice, which I requested to hold the wire. I turned the receiver over to Lucille. She told the sheriff in breathless haste that her mother had been foully dealt with on Huntingdon's island and offered him limitless rewards to capture her slayer.

"Is there anything further we can do?" Lucille paced up and down the room.

"Nothing but wait, dear," Vida said. "I'm sure nothing serious has happened."

"Then why doesn't mother call up and tell us that she is all right?"

"This was unanswerable. No one thought of a sensible reason for keeping Mrs. Green away from the telephone."

"We had better do something to occupy our minds until we hear from the sheriff," Vida said, rising to the position of commanding officer in the emergency.

"I thought of my claims. 'Come with me,' I exclaimed and led the way toward the kitchen. 'I have a surprise for you.'

"You have found Tootles!" Lucille was radiant.

"No," I replied, somewhat crestfallen, for I had again forgotten Tootles, "but I have something for you to eat."

Never have I been so popular as I was at that moment—that is, with all but Lucille. I haven't said much about our hunger because there is little to be said. It is practically impossible to convey to the mind of the well fed reader what it means to miss many meals.

I led them to the kitchen.

"What is it?" Bopp asked.

"It's a secret," I replied mysteriously. Investigating my kettle of clams, which, strange to relate, had not boiled entirely away. "I'll serve it to you and then you can guess what it is."

I found a number of bowls in the pantry, and with a porcelain dipper I ladled a goodly portion of clam broth into each.

"Did you cook this all by yourself?" asked Kent.

"I did," I averred modestly.

"From raw materials you found on the island?" supplemented Bopp.

"Everything in it grew right here," I explained.

"It's Tootles!" screamed Lucille, turning pale and putting her bowl down on the table.

"It can't be," said Bopp, sniffing. "This has a decidedly fishy smell."

"I know it," wailed Lucille, with tears coursing down her cheeks. "That's what makes me think it's Tootles. We have been feeding her lots of fish lately."

PETEY DINK—PETEY WOULDN'T LOOK HALF AS BAD AS THE DOILIES.

I started to explain. "Lucille, how can you accuse me of such a thing?"

"You never liked Tootles. I know it. You cared more for your appetite than for my little darling. Now I see through all the mystery about what the food was and what you were doing all the afternoon while I slept. I suppose you drugged me so that I wouldn't hear the poor little thing's screams. Oh, mother! Oh, Tootles!"

"Lucille," I began, "I—"

"Don't speak to me. I don't even want to see you again, you fat murderer."

That was too much. I might have stood for being called a murderer, but not a fat one.

"Very well," I replied. "It certainly will not be necessary for you to see me. I will go, and I assure you that I will never enter your house again."

I went to the door with as much dignity as I could assume.

"Goodbye," I said as I opened the door.

There was no particular place to go and apparently no chance of leaving the island before morning, anyway. I betought me of the lattice summer house and decided that it might not be a bad idea to take what shelter it afforded.

After some difficulty I found the summer house and sat under its cheerless shelter listening to the rain drip off from its roof on to the dead leaves below while I reviewed my situation.

I had to admit that I could not be in a much worse plight. Lucille was proud and would probably not apologize to me any more than I would retract my spoken vow not to enter her house again. Clearly my love affair was in a bad way and required heroic treatment to put it back into a healthy normal condition.

Meditating upon that sad wondering what could have happened to Mrs. Green on the little island just south of us, I gradually dozed off and slipped down to the floor.

My figure is not such, however, that I rest perfectly on a flat surface. For that reason my slumbers were uneasy and troubled with dreams in which I went through various tortures of the inquisition, such as having my bones broken on the rack and other medieval variations of the third degree.

My last nightmare was that of being blinded by a red hot iron. Who was it that had done to him? I remember. It was Michael Strogoff, the courier of the czar. Shades of Jules Verne! Anyway, it happened to me in my dreams, and the burning sensation was so vivid that I awoke in terror.

Tootles was calmly licking my face. I suppose her tongue had rasped across my eyes. I remembered having been told that this method of awakening a sleeper was one of her own tricks. If I ever have a dog of my own I'm going to spend a lot of time teaching him not to do this trick.

I was about to insist that the pup rest somewhere besides on my head and return to my slumbers once more when my attention was attracted by a slight noise outside. Some one was cautiously approaching the summer house. Who the dickens could be out wandering about at that time of night? I judged that it was about midnight.

The person came nearer. Finally he felt his way around to the door.

The latch was lifted, and some one entered. I silenced an impulse on the part of Tootles to welcome the intruder. The weight of the man who was there not ten feet from me made the floor boards sag as he walked about. He was coming toward me.

For a moment he paused uncertainly and then lit a match. In its light I discovered that he was a tall, nattily clad young man whom I had never seen before.

"I imagine my surprise was infinitesimal compared to his. I was expecting him, but he could not by any possible chance have been prepared for a wide awake, unblinking stranger staring at him six feet away. For an instant, only an instant, I saw a flicker of fear in his eyes; then, disregarding me, he held the match to a cigar stub already between his teeth and drew a long, deep puff."

When we were once more in darkness, save for the tip of his cigar, he said pleasantly, "Good evening."

I waited. I knew that the superstitious savage man way down in his heart was telling him that there would not be any answer.

At last I said with equal pleasantness, "Good evening."

He sighed with relief.

"Is this Green's cottage?" he inquired.

"No," I replied; "this is merely a shelter overlooking an especially fine view of the lake. You will enjoy it in the morning."

"Oh! Unfortunately I shall not be here. You, I presume, are taking care of things for Mr. Green."

"Why, yes," I returned, perfectly willing that he should take me for a night watchman until I discovered what he wanted and how he got there.

"I was going to Mr. Green's cottage, but since I have met you it will save me the trouble."

"I imagine it will," I answered grimly.

"Now wait a minute," he retorted. "Don't you jump at conclusions. I haven't much time or I could explain it all perfectly. I'm not a thief. I'm a newspaper man on the trail of a big story, and there are a few questions I want to ask and a couple of photographs I want to borrow. It looks funny for me to be prowling around at this time of night, but there's an old grouch over at Green's who wouldn't answer my questions over the telephone, so I had to get a boat to bring me over."

"Umph!" I pretended to weigh his case judicially. "So you were going to break into Mr. Green's cottage to ask a few questions? Well, I guess I can answer any questions you want to ask until the sheriff takes you in charge."

"Honest to goodness, man," the reporter exclaimed, "you take yourself seriously, don't you? If you help me I'm willing to cough up a couple of dollars in real money, which is more than my editor will be apt to stand for in my expense account, but if you don't I'll find out anyway, because it's a way I have, and you'll probably be discharged for not catching me."

"But it seems to me that I have caught you," I interposed mildly.

"Hardly," he retorted. "From the glance I got at your figure when I lit the match I should judge that you could run a hundred yards in ten flat minutes, that is—while I am some sprinter, as you will have to admit if you watch me during the next few seconds. I am off."

But he wasn't. While he was talking I had taken the precaution of moving around between him and the door, so that when he started to leave I tripped him neatly and sat on his chest. This is a very effective type of jujitsu for a heavy set man to employ.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Dec. 4, 1878.—Ever since the several fires near the Harris works on River St. the residents there have been on the alert to prevent any more. Several suspicious circumstances have been noted, and these have doubtless become magnified by the excited conditions of the imagination of the observers. A night or two ago a finely dressed stranger was seen prowling about there in a queer manner and being observed took to his heels. What his intent is, is a mystery, but of course the residents there are easily led to believe that other attempts will be made to burn their property.

Mr. Simmons lectured last night to a rather small audience. He gave a very interesting account of the origin of the English language and the methods with which the change has been wrought. His talk was attended by many students of literature throughout the city.

The Hook and Ladder boys have also decided to adopt the Chicago firemen uniform. When they get decked up in their new clothes they cannot help from making a better appearance than before.

From the looks of things in Afghanistan the British troops are on the halt waiting for troops and supplies before attacking the enemy who are strongly fortified at the top of the Peiwar pass. General Roberts expects the needed troops and supplies within the next few hours.

New York, Dec. 4.—Corbin, Grant's brother-in-law, says the General is not a candidate for President.

A Boston special says a movement is on foot to give the General a grand reception there and in New York and Philadelphia. The Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise will be invited and it is expected that they will accept.

dislodging the coin had failed and the frightened parents were about to give up in despair when a bright thought struck the little daughter, who exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, I know how you can get it! Send for our minister; he'll get it out of him!"

"Better be careful. You'll never get another wife like that."

"John," announced Mrs. Stylover, "I'm going to town tomorrow to see the new hats."

"You forget," her husband reminded her, "that tomorrow is Sunday. The shops will be closed."

"Who said anything about shops?" she retorted. "I'm going to church."

Dinner Stories

Jurd Rackledaffer's oldest girl got married last night," related Gap Johnson of Rumus Ridge, Ark., who was in Tumlinville on a shopping expedition.

"Ah! Who was the happy man?" asked the editor of the Torch of Liberty.

"Jurd, I reckon. Leastways, when I rid by his place this morning I seen him standing on his head in a fence corner with his heels waving in the air. And, as Jurd is all of fifty years old, I don't 'low that grief would drive him to cutting such capers as that."

The Methodist minister in a small country town was noted for his begging propensities and for his ability to extract generous offerings from the close-knit congregation, which was made up mostly of farmers. One day the young son of one of the members accidentally swallowed a ten-cent piece, much to the excitement of the rest of the family. Every means of dislodging the coin had failed and the frightened parents were about to give up in despair when a bright thought struck the little daughter, who exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, I know how you can get it! Send for our minister; he'll get it out of him!"

What Is Nuxated Iron?

Physician Explains—Says Public Ought To Know What They Are Taking—Practical Advice on What To Do To Build Up Your Strength, Power and Endurance and Increase the Red Blood Corpuscles.

The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over three million people annually and that so many physicians are prescribing it as a tonic, strength and blood builder in weak, nervous, run-down conditions has led to an investigation of its composition by distinguished physicians and others whose reports should be of great importance to the public generally. Among these is the statement made by Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and Westchester County Hospital, who says: "When one patient after another began asking my opinion of Nuxated Iron, I resolved to go thoroughly into the subject and find out for myself whether or not it possessed the real value claimed by its manufacturers and attested to by so many prominent people. This is exactly what I believe every honest, conscientious physician should do before prescribing or lending his endorsement to any product whatever. If an article is worthless we practitioners ought to be the first to know of it and if it is efficacious we are in duty bound to recommend it for the welfare of our patients. A study of the composition of the Nuxated Iron formula so impressed me with the therapeutic efficacy of the product that I immediately tested it in a number of obstinate cases. So quickly did it increase the strength, energy and endurance of the patients to whom it was administered, that I became firmly convinced of its remarkable and far-reaching blood and blood builder. I have since taken it myself with excellent results. There are thousands of delicate, nervous, run-down folks who need just such a preparation as this but do not know what to make. Therefore I have urged the widest possible publication of its formula so that the public may know what they are taking. This complete formula is now to be found in newspapers throughout the country. It is composed principally of organic iron in the form of iron peptonate of a special specific standard and glycerophosphate which is one of the most costly tonic ingredients known. To the credit of the manufacturers it may be said that they use the most extensive form of iron peptonate, whereas by employing other makes they could have put the same quantity of actual iron in the tablets at less than one-fourth the cost and by using metallic iron they could have reduced the cost to less than one-twelfth, but by thus cheapening the product they would undoubtedly have impaired its therapeutic efficacy. In my opinion a careful examination of this formula by any physician or pharmacist should convince him that Nuxated Iron is to be placed among the very highest class and most strictly ethical preparations known to medical science. It exceeds anything I have ever used for building up the system and increasing the red blood corpuscles thereby enriching and fortifying the blood and increasing the vitality of the system."

Floyd Selck.
The following letter was written by Floyd Selck of Hanover who is with the Base Hospital No. 5 somewhere in France.
I am the day ward master in a ward of convalescent surgical cases. The boys are all up every day the most of them are cheerful. There is a marine in my ward from Janesville. His name is Brown. I work twelve hours a day and have my turn with the other boys in the stretcher bearer four or five hours after the day's work. We sleep in cots, six to a tent. We have about 250 men from the front. We have a floor in it and use candles for light. I bought two the other night for 40 centimes, and some cookies for four cents a piece. They were a little large, but a dollar.

James Conway.
The following letter was written by James A. Conway, who is with the Marine Division.

Oct 29.
Sunday was the day we were supposed to come out of the line for a while. We moved out to a village that was in pretty good shape, over the road didn't look. On Tuesday we had to work in the Ambulance all day. Wednesday we were to head up with gas and oil again and get ready to go up to the line. About 3:30 a. m. Fritz started shelling the road where I was sleeping so I got up and backed the car up ten rods and crawled in for more sleep. Fritz began shelling again so I got up about five. Going back I had three miles to go through a wood. I guess Fritz thought a lot of us for all the way he was sending over high explosives and over our head shrapnel.

James Conway.

Captain Harold Pelton.
Mrs. Fred Howe has received a telegram from the government stating that her nephew Captain Harold Pelton had been severely wounded on October 14. Captain Pelton has also written to his aunt at different times stating the nature of his wound and how he is getting along. The following letters were taken from two of his letters:

October 31, 1918.
They took me to the X-Ray room yesterday and set my leg and put it in a plaster cast. Up until now they had stretched out for the wound to heal. They left a hole in the cast to dress the wound through and the wound is healing up in fine shape. When I went into the operating room the surgeon said, "Young man, we are fixing you up to send you home, what do you think of that?" They haven't said when they are going to send me and they may change their minds about it anyway.

Don't know how long I will have to wear the cast, but after that comes off I will probably be able to get a sick leave. I have been trying to figure out whether I could make it to Janesville by Christmas, but don't think I can make it that soon.
This hospital is near the coast, and all of my baggage is about half way across France, so I guess it is lost as far as I am concerned. It is rather hard luck to be sent home on a stretcher before the war is over, but I wouldn't like to get hit the last day of the war either. I have been on the front enough, so I feel that I have done my share anyway, but I wouldn't mind going up again to take another crack at them.

November 3, 1918.
The leg is getting along in fine shape. The wound is healing fine and it doesn't run a bit. I have a plaster cast on it so it is only a matter of time until the bones set.
This hospital unit is from Milwaukee and the nurse's home is in Watertown, and she is a great friend of the Shurtleffs.

Captain H. P. Pelton.

William Schindler.
William Schindler writes home to his sister that he has been wounded and is in a French hospital. The following is from a letter written to her:

October 15, 1918.
I have been over the top many times, and they never got me, but they sure got me this time. I am wounded in my left shoulder, and getting along very nicely. I expect to be back with the Company in a few weeks. Don't worry for I am getting the very best of care.

William Schindler.

Prospects Good.

Bayfield.—The annual fall herring fishing prospects are the best in years. The fish are unusually large. Two companies on Lake Superior employ over 200 men, boys and girls. This is the first season girls have been employed. Dock laborers get $5 a day and boat crews $7.50 to $9. Panners earn $3, the crew getting out 3,200 pans of fish a day.
The Booth Fisheries Co. is operating five boats and the Boutin Fish Co. fourteen. The industry usually lasts about six to eight weeks.

Mind your eye!

A BUG darts at your eye. Your eye closes—before you think. Reflex action. Your eye telegraphs to your brain "Bug coming!" Your brain flashes back "Close up!" You aren't conscious of the exchange of messages—but your eyelids close. Force of habit protects you. Habit and reflex action save time and effort in numberless ways, and keep your brain clear for the real problem.

Habit, for example, sets the hour when the delicate departments of your digestion combine in a supreme reflex action to move your bowels. Nujol cultivates that habit. If they move regularly all you know is that you feel well.

If they don't move regularly, you know it—the habit has failed.

The food waste stagnates in your large intestine, decays, generates poisons, which are absorbed into your blood and carried all over your body. Your next effort will be more difficult—and soon the bad habit of constipation will be established. The good habit of regularity is replaced by the bad habit of irregularity—reflex action is paralyzed, and the waste accumulates.

Don't exchange a good habit for a bad one. Nujol builds such a strong habit that it offers a maximum of resistance to the clogging of the intestines. Don't wait until you're "sick" to start. Nujol night and morning will give you a reflex action as "regular as clockwork." Be as proud of your inside cleanliness as you are of a clean face and clean teeth. Pills, purgative mineral waters, salts, castor oil and other cathartics, weaken and cause strain. They increase constipation. Nujol acts easily, harmlessly, naturally. Your druggist has it.
